A note from our Executive Director...

Dear Community Members,

For over five decades, the Home Repair Resource Center (HRRC) has been dedicated to "keeping Cleveland Heights in good repair!" Your steadfast support has been the bedrock of our mission to empower homeowners and stabilize neighborhoods. We've provided vital financial aid, essential tool access, and education to thousands, making our community stronger one home at a time.

Today, we stand at an exhilarating new threshold. We are not just looking back at our successes; we are looking forward with a bold new vision to address the evolving needs of our aging housing stock and, critically, invest in the next generation of homeowners and skilled tradespeople.

We are thrilled to share the pillars of our new Strategic Plan and invite you to be part of this exciting growth:

1. Launching Our Future Youth Programs

We believe that home maintenance skills should start young. Our new initiative aims to introduce youth to the fundamentals of home repair, providing valuable, hands-on experience that builds confidence and potentially sparks interest in skilled trades careers. By teaching the next generation, we are fostering a long-term culture of sustainable homeownership in our community.

2. Expanding Core Programs & Reach

Building on the success of existing programs, we are strategically expanding our services. This includes broadening access to our popular educational workshops and Tool Library beyond our immediate area, ensuring more residents can access the resources they need. We are also working with city partners to streamline financial assistance processes, making it easier for homeowners to access grants and low-interest loans for critical health and safety repairs.

3. A Strategic Plan for Sustainable Communities

Our new three-year strategic plan focuses on long-term sustainability. Key initiatives include:

1. Addressing the Housing Stock: Targeting critical issues like lead abatement and energy efficiency improvements to create healthier, more cost-effective homes for families.
2. Innovating Education: Developing new educational series, such as "Practical Sustainability: New Thinking for Older Homes," to equip homeowners with modern solutions for older houses.
3. Forging Stronger Partnerships: Collaborating with neighboring communities and organizations to maximize collective impact and share resources effectively.

We look forward to not just in the business to better houses, but we look to build brighter futures and a more resilient community for everyone.

With immense gratitude for your continued trust and support,

Keesha Allen

Organization Overview

Our History

In 1970, a small group of concerned members of Forest Hill Presbyterian Church gathered to assess the needs of Cleveland Heights and the fear of deteriorating neighborhoods and house values. Out of that discussion was born the small nonprofit, FHC Housing Corporation - which subsequently became HRRC, the Home Repair Resource Center.

Our Mission

Since 1971, Home Repair Resource Center has been empowering homeowners to maintain their homes for sustainable and diverse communities through a creative mix of self-help programs that include financial assistance, financial education and home repair skills training.

HRRC Impact on the Community

By Wesley Walker

In May of 2025, a client was identified through the Circle East (CE) grant application, which was a home repair grant in partnership with the Cuyahoga Land Bank. At that time, an assessment of the home was completed, and the repair needs were many. The primary being the roof that needed replacement. The opening in the roof leaked for years and caused significant interior ceiling damage that had penetrated down to the first-floor dining room.

Once the roof was replaced the need for additional repairs were identified, many related to health and safety were needed. At this point the Black and Latinx Community Reinvestment Fund (BLCRF) grant became instrumental to this senior client's safety and health. Funding for the BLCRF grant was made possible by a partnership with the Fair Housing Center for Rights and Research.

Many health and safety repairs were completed with BLCRF funds. The replacement of the front stair unit and handrails. Installation of code conforming guard rails around the porch. The side entry door was replaced. All the vegetation was removed from the exterior walls of the house. The vines covering allowed the infiltration of a large number of insects. Lastly, the remaining funds allowed the complete cleaning and grooming of the yard area including planting beds, tree removal and seeding of the back yard.

The impact of HRRC's effort were very obvious. It really hit home in conversation with the homeowner's son on my last visit. He approached me at the door and had a very solemn look on his face. When I asked about his mom, he stated, "she died on Saturday past". This was somewhat shocking to me. However, when he told me how glad she was to see the improvements to her home before she died and how happy it made her knowing that her husband would have a safe home, he began to smile. I knew this made it all worthwhile. Particularly to the point of preserving family wealth, he told me that had this work not been done the family expected they would lose this home. Now, his family can keep it going.
